

Sunday night.

My dear Lizzy.

I think I am in duty bound to write to you, you have written so many letters to me without receiving any answer but I thought I should see you so soon, it was not worth while. I write to you now because I can't trust Aunt Caroline. As soon as you have read this, tell Bella that if she can as well as not I wish she would bring out, to morrow some blue checked gingham that I spoke to her about. I want you to be sure to tell her. I am glad you are coming so soon, every thing looks beautifully here; we must have some pleasant walks together. You must kiss Gertrude for me. if she must be Gertrude, which I am very sorry for. in great haste affectionately yours

Emmeline
